

It is my understanding that the National Association of Broadcasters is trying to stop XM radio from providing XM Instant Traffic & Weather. Why is this? Are they afraid of a little technology? Are they afraid of the competition from XM radio because they know full well that XM radio provides a wonderful service that I and many like me are willing to pay for? Do you wonder why so many people are willing to pay for radio these days? This answer is very simple...to get rid of the damn commercials that are more frequent than the actual scheduled programming. To listen to commercials run back to back for 5+ minutes is uncalled for! I am talking about radio as well as tv. I listen to XM radio 100% of the time. NO, I don't watch tv because of the commercials, sexual content, and the boring programming that exists today. XM's instant traffic keeps me up to date on road conditions and traffic as I drive as well as on top of weather situations that often times in the NE have been severe with the winter snowstorms and the spring torrential downpours and consequent flooding. I pay for these services gladly because XM radio offers me quality programming, information without commercials, and this is exactly what so many people have wanted for so long. You need to rethink the whole situation with such great companies as XM radio, because you indeed are wrong.
